Ferdinand II of Aragon's marriage to Isabella I of Castile produced many children, five of whom survived to adulthood. They arranged strategic political marriages. The Granada War (Spanish: Guerra de Granada) was a series of military campaigns between 14, during the reign of the Catholic Monarchs (los Reyes Catolicos) Isabella I of Castile and Ferdinand II of Aragon, against the Nasrid FERDINAND (1452–1516) and ISABELLA° (1451–1504), the monarchs whose marriage created the union of Castile and Aragon which formed the Kingdom of The Catholic Monarchs is the joint title used in history for Queen Isabella I of Castile and King Ferdinand II of Aragon. They were both from the House of Marriage of Isabella and Ferdinand from Isabella of Castile by Oliver Otis Howard. Isabella I (Spanish: Isabel, 22 April 1451 – 26 November 1504) reigned as Queen of Castile from 1474 until her death. Her marriage to Ferdinand II of Aragon Demands for the Hand of Isabella.—Suit of Richard, Duke of Gloucester of the Duke of Guienne.—Claims of Ferdinand.—Opposition of Henry IV. to Ferdinand. Both Isabella and Ferdinand understood the importance of unity together they effected institutional reform in Castile and left Spain one of the best administered Ferdinand of Aragon and Isabella of Castile married in 1469 and ten years later became joint sovereigns of a confederation of kingdoms that laid the basis for Ferdinand II (10 March 1452 – 23 January 1516), called the Catholic, was King of Sicily from 1468 and King of Aragon from 1479 The War of the Castilian Succession, more accurately referred to as Second War of Castilian . Isabella secretly married Ferdinand in 1469 at the age of 17, ignoring Henry IV's wishes. Gradually, the couple gained a larger number of Ferdinand of Aragon marries Isabella of Castile in Valladolid, thus beginning a cooperative reign that would unite all the dominions of Spain and elevate the While still heir to the throne Ferdinand had friendly dealings with many Maranos.
